Implementation of the common strategy with Russia

The committee adopted the report by Arie OOSTLANDER (EPP-ED, NL). While considering that the Common Strategy should be regarded as a unique opportunity to enter into a genuine long-term relationship with Russia and to strengthen common values, the committee also expressed criticism of certain Russian actions, notably over Chechnya. It therefore supported a "double track strategy" of condemning explicitly human rights violations and the disproportionate use of force as in the case in Chechnya, while collaborating with Russia in order to strengthen the rule of law and democratic structures of state. In particular it argued that no purely military solution to the Chechen conflict existed, and that war criminals should be brought to justice. Equally it supported the development of trade links and joint research science and technology projects with Russia, which should be a true strategic partner. There was particular support for the Northern Dimension (cooperation with North West Russia) which the committee felt had been underused. Furthermore the Kaliningrad enclave should become a pilot region for cross-border cooperation. The report said that the EU's Tacis support programme for Russia should be geared towards closer cooperative partnership rather than assistance, and wanted it to reinforce support for the achievement of a state based fully on the rule of law - partly by training civil servants in the field of justice and home affairs. It should also promote long-term economic benefits and help vulnerable groups. The report called for revision of Russian criminal law on money-laundering and a more effective implementation of legislation in this area. The EU was also urged to work with Russia to eliminate nuclear hazards - particularly on efforts to decommission obsolete nuclear submarines. Among other items, the committee wanted EU visa policies to be relaxed to make it easier for Russian students to study in the EU. It supported President Putin's tax reforms and his efforts to restore the authority of the state. It called for a proper balance between the legislative and executive powers, and stressed the need to crack down on organised crime and corruption which was endemic and was creating obstacles to Russia's economic development. Finally the committee welcomed the possibility of future Russian participation in EU-led operations and stressed the importance of studying Russian proposals aimed at increasing shared security on the continent, while maintaining full solidarity and common security within the framework of NATO.?

Implementation of the common strategy with Russia

The European Parliament adopted the resolution by Mr Arie OOSTLANDER (EPP/ED, NL) by 491 votes to 19 with 35 abstentions. (Refer to the previous document). However, there was some criticism too of certain Russian actions, notably over Chechnya. Therefore, a "double track strategy" was supported. The Parliament expressed concern about the case of the journalist, Grigori Pasko, after the decision of the Military section of the Supreme Court to retry him before a Military court in Vladivostok on charges of espionage and high treason because of his reports on the dumping of nuclear wastes in the Sea of Japan by the Russian Navy. Lastly, emphasis was laid on the importance of Russia as a partner in the Balkans, and it is called to play a constructive role in the development and stabilisation of that region. ?

Implementation of the common strategy with Russia

The Council took note of the Presidency's work plan regarding the implementation of the EU's Common Strategy on Russia, elaborated under the responsibility of the Presidency. The Presidency aims to give special priority to a reinforced political and economic dialogue, the strengthening of civil society, the fight against organised crime, the environment, disarmament and non-proliferation as well as support for Russia's efforts to meet the requirements for WTO membership. The European Union's relations with Russia will also be further developed in the context of the Northern Dimension. In line with the conclusions of the European Council in Feira in June 2000, the Presidency will pay particular attention to the implementation of the Northern Dimension Action plan as regards i.a. the environment and nuclear safety, the fight against international crime, and the situation of Kaliningrad. A Foreign Ministers' Conference on the Northern Dimension will be held on 9 April 2001, in Luxembourg. In this context, the Presidency also underlined the continuing concerns of the EU with the situation in Chechnya in particular the humanitarian conditions of the refugees and the population as a whole. ?
