Employment: financial assistance for innovative and job creating small and medium sized enterprises SMEs. Report

PURPOSE: To present an annual report concerning financial assistance to SMEs encouraging innovation as well as job creation. CONTENT: This Report stems from Article 7 of Council Decision 98/347/EC on financial assistance for the promotion of growth, employment and innovation amongst SMEs. The Report in turn covers the three financial instruments set up to implement the measures outlined in the Decision. Specifically, the financial instruments are: - The ETF Start-up Facility - JEV and - The SME Guarantee Facility. As regards the first, the ETF start-up facility, the Report concludes that it is still at an early stage of investment and thus its success or failure difficult to assess. Given the complexities of the programme however the Commission considers its initial start-up phase to have been relatively successful. The European Investment Fund (EIF) which has been set up to manage the funds, estimates that the total remaining budgetary allocation will be committed by the beginning of 2002. This assessment takes into account the steady flow of new proposals from potential fund managers and sponsors. Concerning the second of these instruments, the JEV programme, the Commission's assessment is less favourable. The take-up rate of the programme has been slower than expected. The lengthy processing time of submission is considered too long and could explain why SMEs are reluctant to take advantage of the JEV programme. In addition the current criteria do not correspond to SMEs needs with regard to cross-border investment. For many, cross-border co-operation and the sharing of management responsibilities this implies, is simply too much of a burden. Concerning the last of these programmes, the SME Guarantee Facility, the Report notes that the global take-up rate has been satisfactory. In light of the mixed response to these financial instruments, and in particular the lack of success with JEV, the Council decided in December 2000 to extend the three financial instruments of the Growth and Employment Initiative under a new legal basis, the multi-annual programme for enterprises and entrepreneurship (MAP). The credits proposed for financial instruments under the new MAP are allocated to the three respective financial instruments described above. Within the scope of MAP, the ETF Start-up Facility has been adapted to support the establishment and financing of SMEs in their start-up phase by investing in specialised VC funds and incubators. Concerning the Guarantee Facility three new sub-windows have been added in order to enlarge the range of available instruments. This will guarantee micro credits, equity investment and loans to cover IT equipment. The Seed Capital Action plan is intended to support seed funds, incubators or similar organisations in which the EIF participates. Finally, the JEV programme will be simplified and eligibility criteria adapted. The method of calculating the amount of contribution will be linked both to the investment realised and the number of jobs created.?

Employment: financial assistance for innovative and job creating small and medium sized enterprises SMEs. Report

A list of Annexes summarising the financial assistance measures adopted for innovation and job creation amongst SMEs compliments the Commission Report on this subject. These Annexes refer specifically to statistics on SMEs that are beneficiaries of either the ETF Start-up Facility or the SME guarantee facility. The Annexes listed in this supporting document present a balance sheet on start-up facilities for venture capital funds and an annual survey for the years 1999-2000. Also included is a list of financial intermediaries, examples of projects financed in 2000, a summary of the SME guarantee facility (financial intermediaries and 1999 statistical data on beneficiary SME's) and lastly a summary of a growth and employment initiative - financial statements as at 31 December 2000. ?

Employment: financial assistance for innovative and job creating small and medium sized enterprises SMEs. Report

The committee adopted the report by Philip BUSHILL-MATTHEWS (EPP-ED, UK) on the Commission report for 2000. It welcomed the content and analysis contained in the Commission report but complained about the delay in publishing it. The committee congratulated the European Investment Fund (EIF) on the significant increase in the take-up of the SME guarantee facility. However, particular care was needed in the evaluation of the projects, and financial instruments to promote SMEs must be geared to the needs of those enterprises. The committee endorsed the revisions to the programme by the Council in December 2000 but pointed out that there was no prior discussion with the Parliament about the proposals. Parliament should be involved in such discussions in future. The committee also said that real progress had been achieved within the programme in 2000 but it hoped that performance would improve still further in 2001. There was a risk that concentration on seed capital and start-ups might result in other essential elements of the SME business cycle being neglected, such as ongoing business development, Initial Public Offering or subsequent sale, which could have an impact on employment growth. Risk capital and global loans should not be provided solely to SMEs engaging in life sciences, biotechnology, ITC and multimedia but also to sustainable high-tech sectors.?
