Civil judicial cooperation: divorce and parental responsibility

PURPOSE : the recognition and enforcement of decisions in matrimonial matters and those of parental responsibility based on common rules of jurisdiction. CONTENT : this Regulation comprehends a single instrument on divorce and parental responsibility. As regards matrimonial matters, the relevant provisions are taken over from Council Regulation 1347/2000/EC. On parental responsibility, the objective of Community action is to protect the child's best interests. This means, in particular, to give concrete expression to his or her fundamental right to maintain contact with both parents, as laid down in Article 24 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the EU. To this end, the Commission proposes:

-to extend the principle of mutual recognition to all decisions on parental responsibility; -to abolish exequatur for rights of access (corresponding to the French initiative); -matters relating to maintenance are excluded; -jurisdiction shall lie in the first place with the Member State of the child's habitual residence, except for certain cases of a change in the child's residence or pursuant to an agreement between the holders of parental responsibility; -the proposal does not prevent Member States from taking protective measures in urgent cases with regard to persons or property situated in the State; -in cases of child abduction, the courts of the Member State to which the child has been removed are able to take a provisional protective measure not to return the child, which is superseded by a judgement on custody issued by the courts of the child's former habitual residence. Should that judgement entail the return of the child, the child must be returned without any special procedure being required for recognition and enforcement in the Member State to which the child is being abducted. The child has a right to be heard. -the recognition and enforcement of judgements given in a Member State are based on the principle of mutual trust and the grounds for non-recognition must be kept to the minimum required. These relate to observing public policy in the Member State of enforcement, safeguarding the rights of defence and those of the parties, including the rights of the child, and withholding recognition of irreconcilable judgments; -no special procedure is required in the Member State of enforcement for judgments on rights of access and return that have been certified in the Member State of origin; -Denmark is not bound by the proposed Regulation.?

Civil judicial cooperation: divorce and parental responsibility

The committee adopted the report by Mary BANOTTI (EPP-ED, IRL) broadly approving the Commission proposal, which had taken up many of the suggestions made by the rapporteur in an earlier working document. It adopted just a few amendments (under the consultation procedure), such as specifying the period within which an abducted child has to be returned (as far as possible, within a period of two months) and providing for alternatives for hearing a child in court. It also stipulated that a judgment that entails the return of a child shall state the sanctions which will apply in the event of the non-return of the child by the specified date. ?

Civil judicial cooperation: divorce and parental responsibility

The European Parliament adopted a resolution drafted by Mary BANOTTI (EPP-ED, Ire) making some amendments to the Commission's proposal. (Please refer to the document dated 5/11/02.) Other amendments adopted include: -the hearing of the child must take account of the age and maturity of the child and may take the form of a separate interview by an independent, qualified person; -where the procedures in the regulation have been followed, the grounds for non-recognition should not apply to judgments on the right of access and the return of the child; -in all court decisions, the child's best interests must be the primary consideration; -Member States must ensure that central authorities have adequate resources to fulfil the tasks described in the regulation.?

Civil judicial cooperation: divorce and parental responsibility

PURPOSE : to extend the scope of Council Regulation 1347/2000/EC to cover all civil proceedings relating to parental responsibility by severing the link with the matrimonial proceedings. LEGISLATIVE ACT : Council Regulation 2201/2003/EC concerning jurisdiction and the recognition and enforcement of judgements in matrimonial matters and the matters of parental responsibility, repealing Regulation 1347/2000/EC. CONTENT : the Council adopted the Regulation concerning jurisdiction and the recognition and enforcement of judgements in matrimonial matters and the matters of parental responsibility. This Regulation replaces Regulation 1347/2000/EC, which is consequently repealed. In accordance with the Protocols on the position of respectively the United Kingdom and Ireland as well as Denmark, annexed to the Treaties, Ireland and the United Kingdom have given notice of their wish to take part in the adoption and application of this Regulation, whereas Denmark is not participating in its adoption and will not be bound by it or subject to its application. This Regulation shall apply, whatever the nature of the court or tribunal, in civil matters relating to divorce, legal separation or marriage annulment; the attribution, exercise, delegation, restriction or termination of parental responsibility. The matters referred to above may, in particular, deal with rights of custody and rights of access; guardianship, curatorship and similar institutions; the designation and functions of any person or body having charge of the child's person or property, representing or assisting the child; the placement of the child in a foster family or in institutional care; measures for the protection of the child relating to the administration, conservation or disposal of the child's property. On the other hand, this Regulation shall not apply to the establishment or contesting of a parent-child relationship; decisions on adoption, measures preparatory to adoption, or the annulment or revocation of adoption; the name and forenames of the child; emancipation; maintenance obligations; trusts or succession; measures taken as a result of criminal offences committed by children. This Regulation constitutes an important step to the objective of creating an area of freedom, security and justice, in which the free movement of persons is ensured. The Regulation shall apply, whatever the nature of the Court of tribunal, in civil matters relating to divorce, legal separation or marriage annulment as well as in matters relating to parental responsibility. This Regulation stipulates which courts of the Member States have jurisdiction in matters relating to the dissolution of the marriage or on parental responsibility. This means for instance that, if a spouse, living in one Member State wants to sue the other spouse, having his or her habitual residence in another Member State, the rules established by the Regulation will apply. Likewise, if a parent or any other holder of parental responsibility wishes to regulate the rights or duties relating to the person or the property of a child, jurisdiction will be determined in accordance with the Regulation. Such judgements will be recognised and enforced in all Member States in accordance with the rules laid down by the Regulation. In particular, any enforceable judgement on rights of access that have been certified by a judge shall be automatically recognised and enforceable in any Member State without the need for a declaration of enforceability and without any possibility of opposing its recognition. Of particular importance are the rules on child abduction. The Regulation provides for complementary rules in order to obtain the return of a child to his or her habitual residence in cases where the child has been abducted in another Member State. Moreover, the return of such a child to his or her habitual residence will take place without the need for a declaration of enforceability and without any possibility of opposing its recognition where the judge of origin has delivered a certificate. The Regulation provides for cooperation between the central authorities in matters of parental responsibility. ENTRY INTO FORCE : This Regulation will enter into force on 1st August 2004 and shall apply from 1st March 2005.?

Civil judicial cooperation: divorce and parental responsibility

The Commission presented a report on the application of Council Regulation (EC) No 2201/2003 concerning jurisdiction and the recognition and enforcement of judgements in matrimonial matters and the matters of parental responsibility, repealing Regulation (EC) No 1347/2000.

Effects of intra-EU mobility on families: the growing mobility of citizens within the Union has led to an increasing number of families with an international dimension, notably families whose members are of different nationalities, live in different Member States or live in a Member State of which one or more of them are not nationals.

In 2011, there were 33.3 million foreign citizens resident in the Union-27, 6.6% of the total population. The majority, 20.5 million, were citizens of non-Union countries, while the remaining 12.8 million were citizens of other Union Member States.

According to Article 81 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, the Union adopts measures in the field of judicial cooperation in civil matters having cross-border implications. Where families break up, such cooperation is particularly necessary to give children a secure legal environment to maintain relations with persons who have parental responsibility over them and may live in another Member State.

Regulation No 1347/2000 laying down rules on jurisdiction, recognition and enforcement of judgments on divorce, separation and marriage annulment as well as judgments on parental responsibility for the children of both spouses was the first Union instrument adopted in the area of judicial cooperation in family law matters.

This Regulation was repealed by Regulation No 2201/2003 (commonly known as the Brussels IIa Regulation). It is the cornerstone of Union judicial cooperation in matrimonial matters and matters of parental responsibility. It applies since 1 March 2005 to all Member States except Denmark.

Avoid conflicts-of-law: the Regulation provides for uniform rules to settle conflicts of jurisdiction between Member States and facilitates the free circulation of judgments, authentic instruments and agreements in the Union by laying down provisions on their recognition and enforcement in another Member State.

It complements the Hague Convention of 25 October 1980 on the civil aspects of international child abduction.

This Regulation does not contain rules to determine which law applies to cross-border disputes in the fields covered by it. In 2006, the Commission proposed amendments to the Regulation as regards jurisdiction and introducing rules concerning applicable law in matrimonial matters. No unanimity could be reached within the Council with regard to the rules on applicable law and the Commission therefore withdrew the 2006 proposal to amend the Regulation.

On the basis of new Commission proposals, 14 Member States agreed to establish enhanced cooperation among themselves¹² and adopted Regulation (EU) No 1259/2010 laying down rules determining the law applicable to divorce and legal separation (hereafter "the Rome III Regulation"). This was the first time that enhanced cooperation was used in the Union. By its nature, an enhanced cooperation is open to the participation of all Member States with the ultimate goal that the Rome III Regulation is taken up by all Member States. Since the adoption of the Rome III Regulation two more Member States have decided to participate in the enhanced cooperation.

Purpose of the report and main conclusions: this report concerns the monitoring of the implementation of the Brussels IIa Regulation. It follows the structure of the Regulation by reviewing in separate sections the provisions on jurisdiction, recognition and enforceability of judgments and cooperation between Member States' Central Authorities. It also focuses more specifically on a number of cross-cutting issues, namely the return of the child in cases of parental abduction, the enforcement of judgments and the placement of a child in another Member State.

The report concluded that the Regulation is a well-functioning instrument that has brought important benefits to citizens. It has facilitated the settlement of increasing cross-border litigation in matrimonial and parental responsibility matters through a comprehensive system of jurisdiction rules and an efficient system of cooperation between Member State Central Authorities. It also prevents parallel proceedings and the free circulation of judgments, authentic instruments and agreements.

The provisions on the return of the child complementing the 1980 Hague Convention aimed at deterring parental child abduction between Member States are regarded as particularly useful. However, there are indications on the basis of data and preliminary feedback from experts that existing rules could be improved. In order to explore comprehensively the concerns identified in this report, the Commission intends to launch a further policy evaluation of the existing rules and their impact on citizens. To this end, the Commission will also launch a public consultation. On the basis of the evaluation and the replies to the public consultation, the Commission will take action as appropriate.
