Direct and indirect taxation: mutual assistance by the competent authorities (amend. Directive 77/799/EEC)

PURPOSE : to modify certain provisions concerning Directive 77/799/EEC and to introduce two new elements on notification and on simultaneous controls of a business. CONTENT : Practices of tax evasion and tax avoidance, extending across the frontiers of Member States, lead to budget losses and violate the principle of fair taxation. In turn, these result in distortions of capital movements and conditions of competition and adversely affect the workings of the single market. Thus, there is a strong community interest in Member States being able to enforce their tax laws effectively. The cross-border nature of these offensive practices means that national measures on their own are not sufficient. Hence, provision is needed for Member States to be able to co-operate and to provide mutual assistance. The scope of the proposal is to modify several existing provisions of the Directive in order to make the language clearer and to shorten some of the procedures that need to be followed when assistance is requested. There are also some new elements. One of these concerns notification, in one Member State, of instruments or decisions originating in another Member State where a taxpayer has moved to the second state. Another makes provision for Member States to conduct simultaneous controls of a business that operates in a number of different countries. The Directive applies to direct taxation only because a separate instrument has been adopted for VAT and there is to be another for excise duties. It is important to keep these aligned even though direct taxes are exclusively the competence of the Member States. The modifications are as follows: - the Directive is amended so that any request for information is treated as made under the domestic laws and practices of the State in which the authority collecting the information is situated. The text of the suggested amendment is identical to that contained in the proposal relating to VAT; - currently it is only possible to disclose information where the competent authority of the Member State that supplies it makes no objection. There is some debate on whether explicit approval is necessary or whether tacit approval is sufficient. The purpose of the text is to eliminate any possible delay, by rendering it unnecessary to suspend court action pending clarification, in those Member states that consider explicit approval is necessary. - it is made explicit that a Member State may not refuse to obtain and exchange information on the grounds that the information in question was not required for its domestic tax purposes; - a new article sets out the procedure to be followed where it is necessary to notify a taxpayer of instruments or decisions emanating from the administrative authorities of the Member State where the tax liability arises; - simultaneous controls are regarded as one of the most efficient ways in which competent authorities can exchange information. Abuses involving under-invoicing and over-invoicing, where transactions took place between related entities in cross-border situations (transfer-pricing), may be tackled by stepping up information exchange. Synchronised inspections would be one way of developing increased co-operation between tax administrations. The amendment to the Directive would make it possible to have these types of controls but only where the competent authorities agreed that they wanted to take part.?

Direct and indirect taxation: mutual assistance by the competent authorities (amend. Directive 77/799/EEC)

PURPOSE : to improve and clarify the rules on mutual assistance in the field of indirect taxation. LEGISLATIVE ACT : Council Directive 2004/56/EC amending Directive 77/799/EEC concerning mutual assistance by the competent authorities of the Member States in the field of direct taxation, certain excise duties and taxation of insurance premiums. CONTENT : Council Directive 77/799/EEC established the ground rules for administrative cooperation and the exchange of information between Member States in order to detect and prevent tax evasion and tax fraud and to enable Member States to carry out a correct tax assessment. This Regulation aims to improve, expand and modernise those rules. The main points are as follows: - when a Member State conducts enquiries in order to obtain the information necessary to respond to a request for assistance, that State will be regarded as acting on its own account; in that way, there will only be one set of rules applying to the information-gathering process and the investigation will not be undermined by delays; - if a Member State has received information from another Member State, it will not subsequently have to request permission to disclose the information in public hearings or judgements; - a Member State is not under any obligation to carry out enquiries in order to obtain the information necessary to respond to a request for assistance where either its legislation or administrative practices do not permit its competent authority to conduct enquiries or to collect such information; - the competent authority of a Member State may refuse information or assistance when the requesting Member State is not in a position to supply the same type of information, whether for reasons of fact or of law; - there is a legal requirement in certain Member States that a taxpayer must be notified of decisions and instruments concerning his tax liability. This may cause difficulties for the tax authorities, including cases where the taxpayer has relocated to another Member State. In such circumstances, the tax authorities may call upon the assistance of the competent authorities of the Member State to which the taxpayer has relocated; - since the tax situation of one or more persons liable to tax established in several Member States often is of common or complementary interest, it is now possible for simultaneous controls to be carried out to such persons by two or more Member States, by mutual agreement and on a voluntary basis; This may take place whenever such controls appear to be more effective than controls carried out by only one Member State; It should be noted that the Commission submitted its proposal for a Directive on the basis of Article 95 of the Treaty. The Council, taking the view that the proposal for a Directive related to the harmonisation of legislation in the field of both direct and indirect taxation and that the act should therefore be adopted on the basis of Articles 93 and 94 of the Treaty, consulted the European Parliament by letter dated 12 November 2003 informing it of the Council's intention of changing the legal basis. ENTRY INTO FORCE : 29 April 2004. DATE OF TRANSPOSITION : 1 January 2005.?
