

Procedure file

Basic information
INI - Own-initiative procedure	2009/2201(INI)
Procedure completed
Corporate and social responsibility in international trade agreements
Subject
3.45 Enterprise policy, inter-company cooperation
4.10 Social policy, social charter and protocol
6.20.03 Bilateral economic and trade agreements and relations
6.20.05 Multilateral and plurilateral economic and trade agreements and relations

Key players
European Parliament	Committee responsible	Rapporteur	Appointed
	INTA International Trade		29/09/2009
		S&D DÉSIR Harlem
		Shadow rapporteur
		PPE HANDZLIK Małgorzata
	Committee for opinion	Rapporteur for opinion	Appointed
	EMPL Employment and Social Affairs		02/03/2010
		S&D BERÈS Pervenche
European Commission	Commission DG	Commissioner
	Trade	DE GUCHT Karel

Key events
26/11/2009	Committee referral announced in Parliament
26/10/2010	Vote in committee		Summary
11/11/2010	Committee report tabled for plenary	A7-0317/2010
24/11/2010	Debate in Parliament
25/11/2010	Results of vote in Parliament
25/11/2010	Decision by Parliament	T7-0446/2010	Summary
25/11/2010	End of procedure in Parliament

Technical information
Procedure reference	2009/2201(INI)
Procedure type	INI - Own-initiative procedure
Procedure subtype	Initiative
Legal basis	Rules of Procedure EP 54
Stage reached in procedure	Procedure completed

Documentation gateway

Committee opinion	EMPL	PE439.376	04/06/2010	EP
Committee draft report		PE448.821	14/09/2010	EP
Amendments tabled in committee		PE450.649	07/10/2010	EP
Committee report tabled for plenary, single reading		A7-0317/2010	11/11/2010	EP
Text adopted by Parliament, single reading		T7-0446/2010	25/11/2010	EP	Summary
Commission response to text adopted in plenary		SP(2011)1476/2	02/05/2011	EC

Corporate and social responsibility in international trade agreements

The Committee on International Trade adopted the own-initiative report drafted by Harlem DÉsir (S&D, FR) on corporate social responsibility in international trade agreements.

Noting that global challenges have been sharpened by the financial crisis and its social consequences, and that globalisation has been accompanied by more intense competition between countries, Members consider that new, more efficient and better-enforced rules should contribute to the development of more sustainable policies in companies which genuinely take into account social and environmental concerns. They point out, in particular, that to attract foreign investment, certain governments have tolerated serious abuses of human and labour rights and damage to the environment. Now, the principles underpinning corporate social responsibility (CSR), which are fully recognised by the OECD, the ILO or the United Nations, presuppose compliance with the legislation in force, in particular in the areas of employment, labour relations, human rights, the environment? without bearing in mind that promoting CSR is an objective supported by the European Union and that EU trade policy can only develop, in accordance with the Treaty, in compliance with international law. They note that the definition of CSR is 'the responsibility of an organisation for the impacts of its decisions and activities on society and the environment, through transparent and ethical behaviour that: contributes to sustainable development, including the health and the welfare of society; takes into account the expectations of stakeholders; is in compliance with applicable law and consistent with international norms of behaviour?.

CSR fully integrated in the trade agreements concluded by the EU: Members take the view that the social clauses in trade agreements should be complemented by the incorporation of the concept of CSR. They call for CSR principles and obligations to be taken into account and integrated into the future Commission communication on 'A New Trade Policy for Europe under the EUROPE 2020 Strategy'. Considering CSR to be an effective tool for improving competitiveness, skills and training opportunities, occupational safety and the working environment, as well as promoting a sustainable environmental policy (although it clearly cannot supplant labour regulations or collective agreements), Members call for companies to be urged to apply CSR with a view to safeguarding the physical integrity of workers and to respect the human rights, in particular in SMEs.

Members also point out that CSR should also address new areas such as i) the organisation of work, ii) equal opportunities and social inclusion, iii) anti-discrimination measures, iv) the development of lifelong education and training, v) quality of work, vi) equality of pay and career prospects and vii) the promotion of innovative projects.

In parallel, Members recall that companies and their subsidiaries are among the main players in economic globalisation and international trade. In this context, they call on the Commission to investigate the possibility of establishing a harmonised definition of the relations between an undertaking designated the 'parent company' and all undertakings in a relationship of dependency with respect to that company, whether those undertakings are subsidiaries, suppliers or sub-contractors, in order to establish the legal liability of each of them. Given the key role played by corporations, their subsidiaries and their supply chains in international trade, that corporate social and environmental responsibility must become an integral part of the European Union's trade agreements;

More generally, Members recommend the promotion of good CSR practices by all companies, irrespective of where they operate. Citing the important role of the social dialogue in developing best practice in terms of CSR, Members call for a 'CRS culture' to be spread through training and awareness-raising, and by the strengthened role of European Works Councils.

Members also call for:

- CSR to be incorporated into the GSP and GSP+ generalised systems of preferences while ensuring that transnational companies, whether or not they have their registered office in the European Union, whose subsidiaries or supply chains are located in countries participating in the GSP, and in particular in GSP+, are required to comply with their national and international legal obligations in the areas of human rights, labour standards and environmental rules;
- New impact assessments on sustainable development should be undertaken in order to properly reflect the economic, social, human rights and environmental implications, including climate change mitigation goals, of trade negotiations and include appropriate follow-up by the Commission. The Parliament should also be kept fully informed on how the findings of these Sustainability Impact Assessments (SIA) of agreements are incorporated into negotiations prior to their conclusion.

CSR clauses in all the European Union's trade agreements: Members propose, in more general terms, that future trade agreements negotiated by the Union should incorporate a chapter on sustainable development which includes a 'CSR clause'. This clause would incorporate the following:

- mutual undertaking by the two parties to promote internationally-agreed CSR instruments in the context of the agreement and their trade relations;
- incentives to encourage undertakings to enter into CSR commitments negotiated with all the social dialogue stakeholders;
- a requirement ? which takes into account the specific situation and capabilities of SMEs within the scope of the recommendation 2003/361/CE of May 2003 and according to the ?think small first? principle? for corporations to publish their CSR balance sheets at least every two or three years to encourage the visibility and credibility of CSR practices;
- a requirement for undertakings to show due diligence, i.e. a requirement to take measures in advance with a view to identifying and preventing violations of human and environmental rights, corruption or tax evasion, including in their subsidiaries and supply chains;
- a requirement for companies to commit to free, open and informed prior consultation with local and independent stakeholders before a project that impacts upon a local community commences;
- a particular focus on the impact of the employment of children and child labour practices.

Other provisions could be included including the possibility to carry out investigations in the event of proven breaches of CSR commitments or the reinforcement of transnational judicial cooperation to sanction infringements committed by corporations. Members propose a parliamentary monitoring mechanism to ensure the implementation of the CSR clause, as well as a transparency mechanism or forum that would encourage companies to voluntarily achieve higher standards of CSR.

Promoting CSR in multilateral trade policies: lastly, Members call on the Commission to advocate the incorporation of a CSR dimension into multilateral trade policies in international for a, such as the OECD and the WTO.

They call for an international convention to be drawn up to establish the responsibilities of ?host countries? and ?countries of origin?, as part of the fight against the violation of human rights by multinational corporations and the implementation of the principle of extra-territoriality. They also advocate the establishment, within the WTO, of a Trade and Decent Work Committee, along the lines of the Trade and Environment Committee, which would provide a forum for the discussion, in particular, of the issues of labour standards.

Corporate and social responsibility in international trade agreements

The European Parliament adopted by 480 votes to 48, with 6 abstentions, a resolution on corporate social responsibility in international trade agreements.

Parliament notes that global challenges have been sharpened by the financial crisis and its social consequences, and have led to worldwide discussion on the need for a new regulatory approach and governance issues in the world economy, including international trade. Parliament takes the view that the new, more efficient and better-enforced rules should contribute to the development of more sustainable policies which genuinely take into account social and environmental concerns. It notes, further, that globalisation has increased competitive pressure among countries to attract foreign investors and competition between corporations, which has sometimes led to serious abuses of human and labour rights and damage to the environment in order to attract trade and investment.

The resolution recalls that the principles underpinning CSR, which are fully recognised at international level, whether by the OECD, the ILO or the United Nations, concern the responsible behaviour expected of undertakings and presuppose, first of all, compliance with the legislation in force, in particular in the areas of employment, labour relations, human rights, the environment, consumer interests and transparency vis-à-vis consumers, the fight against corruption and taxation.

Parliament recalls that promoting CSR is an objective supported by the EU and that the Commission takes the view that the Union must ensure that the external policies it implements make a genuine contribution to the sustainable development and to the social development of the countries concerned and that the actions of European corporations, wherever they invest and operate, are in accordance with European values and internationally agreed norms.

CSR fully integrated in the trade agreements concluded by the EU: Parliament takes the view that the social clauses in trade agreements should be complemented by the incorporation of the concept of CSR. It calls for CSR principles and obligations to be taken into account and integrated into the future Commission communication on ?A New Trade Policy for Europe under the EUROPE 2020 Strategy?. Considering CSR to be an effective tool for improving competitiveness, skills and training opportunities, occupational safety and the working environment, as well as promoting a sustainable environmental policy (although it clearly cannot supplant labour regulations or collective agreements), Members call for companies to be urged to apply CSR with a view to safeguarding the physical integrity of workers and to respect the human rights, in particular in SMEs.

Parliament also points out that CSR should also address new areas such as: i) the organisation of work; ii) equal opportunities and social inclusion; iii) anti-discrimination measures; iv) the development of lifelong education and training; v) quality of work; vi) equality of pay and career prospects and vii) the promotion of innovative projects.

In parallel, Parliament recalls that companies and their subsidiaries are among the main players in economic globalisation and international trade. In this context, it calls on the Commission to investigate the possibility of establishing a harmonised definition of the relations between an undertaking designated the ?parent company? and all undertakings in a relationship of dependency with respect to that company, whether those undertakings are subsidiaries, suppliers or sub-contractors, in order to establish the legal liability of each of them. Given the key role played by corporations, their subsidiaries and their supply chains in international trade, that corporate social and environmental responsibility must become an integral part of the European Union?s trade agreements;

More generally, Parliament recommends the promotion of good CSR practices by all companies, irrespective of where they operate. Citing the important role of the social dialogue in developing best practice in terms of CSR, it calls for a ?CRS culture? to be spread through training and awareness-raising, and by the strengthened role of European Works Councils.

Members also call for:

- CSR to be incorporated into the GSP and GSP+ generalised systems of preferences while ensuring that transnational companies, whether or not they have their registered office in the European Union, whose subsidiaries or supply chains are located in countries participating in the GSP, and in particular in GSP+, are required to comply with their national and international legal obligations in the areas of human rights, labour standards and environmental rules;
- New impact assessments on sustainable development should be undertaken in order to properly reflect the economic, social, human rights and environmental implications, including climate change mitigation goals, of trade negotiations and include appropriate follow-up by the Commission. The Parliament should also be kept fully informed on how the findings of these Sustainability Impact Assessments (SIA) of agreements are incorporated into negotiations prior to their conclusion.

Parliament also calls for:

CSR to be incorporated into the GSP and GSP+ generalised systems of preferences while ensuring that transnational companies, whether or not they have their registered office in the European Union, whose subsidiaries or supply chains are located in countries participating in the GSP, and in particular in GSP+, are required to comply with their national and international legal obligations in the areas of human rights, labour standards and environmental rules. Parliament urges that the European Union and the states participating in and benefiting from the GSP should be required to ensure that corporations fulfil these obligations. It calls for such compliance to be made a binding requirement in the context of the GSP;

New impact assessments on sustainable development should be undertaken in order to properly reflect the economic, social, human rights and environmental implications, including climate change mitigation goals, of trade negotiations and include appropriate follow-up by the Commission. The Parliament should also be kept fully informed on how the findings of these Sustainability Impact Assessments (SIA) of agreements are incorporated into negotiations prior to their conclusion.

CSR clauses in all the European Union's trade agreements: Parliament proposes, in more general terms, that future trade agreements negotiated by the Union should incorporate a chapter on sustainable development which includes a 'CSR clause'. This clause would incorporate the following:

- mutual undertaking by the two parties to promote internationally-agreed CSR instruments in the context of the agreement and their trade relations;
- incentives to encourage undertakings to enter into CSR commitments negotiated with all the social dialogue stakeholders;
- a requirement which takes into account the specific situation and capabilities of SMEs within the scope of the recommendation 2003/361/CE of May 2003 and according to the 'think small first' principle for corporations to publish their CSR balance sheets at least every two or three years to encourage the visibility and credibility of CSR practices;
- a requirement for undertakings to show due diligence, i.e. a requirement to take measures in advance with a view to identifying and preventing violations of human and environmental rights, corruption or tax evasion, including in their subsidiaries and supply chains;
- a requirement for companies to commit to free, open and informed prior consultation with local and independent stakeholders before a project that impacts upon a local community commences;
- a particular focus on the impact of the employment of children and child labour practices.

Other provisions could be included including the possibility to carry out investigations in the event of proven breaches of CSR commitments or the reinforcement of transnational judicial cooperation to sanction infringements committed by corporations. Parliament proposes a parliamentary monitoring mechanism to ensure the implementation of the CSR clause, as well as a transparency mechanism or forum that would encourage companies to voluntarily achieve higher standards of CSR.

Promoting CSR in multilateral trade policies: lastly, Parliament calls on the Commission to advocate the incorporation of a CSR dimension into multilateral trade policies in international fora, such as the OECD and the WTO. It calls to explore, within these same forums, the elaboration of an international convention to be drawn up to establish the responsibilities of 'host countries' and 'countries of origin', as part of the fight against the violation of human rights by multinational corporations and the implementation of the principle of extra-territoriality. It also advocates the establishment, within the WTO, of a Trade and Decent Work Committee, along the lines of the Trade and Environment Committee, which would provide a forum for the discussion, in particular, of the issues of labour standards.