Imports into the Canary Islands of sensitive products: derogation of anti-dumping measures (amend. regul. 1602/92/EEC)

This proposal for a regulation aimed to amend Council Regulation 1602/92/EEC temporarily derogating from implementation of Community anti-dumping measures on imports into the Canary Islands of certain sensitive products. This system of derogation aimed to ensure the continuity of supply of products destined for local or tourist consumption on the Canary Islands market at equivalent prices to those on the market before the introduction of the common trade arrangements. These products were thus imported into the Islands with an exemption from anti-dumping duties, which were collected when the products were re-exported to the remainder of the Community's customs territory. For reasons of clarity and legal certainty, the Commission proposed explicitly inserting this clause in the regulation (specific destination clause) so that the Spanish authorities took the necessary measures to ensure that: - the suspension of tariff duties was granted solely to products destined for local or tourist consumption; and that - the CCT duties were collected when these products were dispatched to other parts of the Community. In addition, these authorities should forward to the Commission the data relating to the use of the fixed quantities of such products on the fifteenth of the month following each quarter from 15 September 1992 (in fact, a error in Regulation 1602/92/EEC distorted the interpretation of the Spanish authorities, resulting in the data transmitted by the authorities being unusable by the Commission departments until now). ?

Imports into the Canary Islands of sensitive products: derogation of anti-dumping measures (amend. regul. 1602/92/EEC)

OBJECTIVE: to guarantee the supply of products intended for local consumption or tourism on the Canary Islands market at prices equivalent to those on the market before the introduction of the common commercial policy. COMMUNITY MEASURE: Regulation (EC) No 3257/94 amending Regulation (EEC) No 1602/92 temporarily derogating from implementation of Community anti-dumping measures on imports into the Canary Islands of certain sensitive products. SUBSTANCE: Imports of the products covered by the system of derogations, namely sensitive products intended for local consumption or tourism in the Canary Islands, will be exempt from anti-dumping duties, which will be collected when the products, originally exempt from such duties, are re-exported throughout the rest of the customs territory of the Community.

The Regulation explicitly inserts the clause concerning the specific destination (in other words, a derogation purely for the Canary Islands market) so that the Spanish authorities take the necessary measures to ensure that: . duties are suspended solely for products destined for local consumption or tourism; . the CCT duties are collected when these products are re-exported to the rest of the Community. The Council did not accept the Commission's proposal to forward to its departments, on a set date, data concerning the use of these products. ENTRY INTO FORCE: 1 January 1995. ?
