Directive 1998/4

OJ L 101 01.04.1998, p. 0001 Summary

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

OBJECTIVE: to amend the directive on the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors in order to bring them into line with the new GATT agreement extending the current framework of balanced rights and obligations with regard to public procurement. CONTENT: the proposal for a directive makes provision for the following amendments: - Scope: the distinction between telecommunications and the other sectors covered has been maintained. In addition, the thresholds which currently apply to the telecommunications sector (ECU 5,000,000 for works contracts and ECU 600,000 for supply and service contracts) have been left unchanged. As far as the other sectors are concerned, (water, energy, transport), it is proposed to replace: . for works contracts: the threshold of ECU 5,000,000 by the equivalent in ECU of SDR 5,000,000 (ECU 4,952,730 on 1 January 1994) and . for supply and service contracts: the threshold of ECU 400,000 by the equivalent in ECU of SDR 400,000 (ECU 396,218 on 1 January 1994). - Possible assistance in preparing technical specifications: a new provision prohibits the public authorities from asking for or accepting assistance in drawing up specifications from a company with a commercial interest in the contract or where this might obstruct the competition. - Information for candidates rejected: if an enterprise so requests, the contracting authority must tell it why it was rejected and what advantages the tender selected presents, unless there is legitimate cause not to divulge this information. - A provision has been introduced in order to guarantee permanent access to the system of qualifications. - Negotiated procedures without prior competition for additional works or services may only be used up to 50% of the value of the initial contract; -Deadlines for the receipt of tenders in restricted or negotiated procedures: a deadline of at least 40 days from the date of the invitation to tender has been introduced. - The obligations of the Member States as regards the provision of statistics have been changed. Statistics must be provided on contracts which exceed the stated thresholds. It is proposed to limit the obligation for statistics to sectors covered by the GATT agreement and to exclude the RDT or "residual service" contracts listed in Anne XVI B to the directive. However, it is proposed that information should be provided on all categories of contracting entities operating in the sectors in question. - Finally, a new article guarantees that access for the Member States' enterprises, products and services to public procurement within the EU will be at least as favourable as the access for which provision is made in the GATT agreement for the enterprises, products and services of the third countries which have signed the agreement.?

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

The ESC commented only on the proposed changes to the existing Directives, deliberately avoiding any analysis of the Directives themselves. It was aware that the Directives were shortly to be the subject of a four-year review and it would give its Opinion then in the light of lessons learned from the application of the Directives and on the basis of prior consultation. The reviews should take into due consideration the social aspects involved in the application of these Directives. The ESC wanted to take this opportunity to stress the importance to the functioning of the single market of the urgent transposition into national law in all Member States of the Public Procurement Directives.

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

The Council reached a preliminary position on certain key questions relating to the amendment of Community Directives on public contracts in the light of the Agreement on Government Procurement (GPA) resulting from the Uruguay Round. The Council?s common position will be adopted after examination of any amendments proposed by the European Parliament. The GPA will apply in the Community as from 1 January 1996 without the need for any transposing act. In order to avoid the coexistence of differing Community and international rules, adoption by the Council of the Directives in question is a matter of urgency.

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

Following the recommendation of its rapporteur, Mr Werner LANGEN (PPE, D), the committee is proposing the rejection of the Commission proposal on coordinating procurement procedures in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors. All the participants in the public hearing held on 31 October 1995 expressed their misgivings on three essential points of the proposal: - its scope: the proposal goes further than the GATT agreement, in that it applies to public and private undertakings and the sectors specifically excluded by the Government Procuration Act (telecommunications, gas distribution, prospection/extraction of oil, gas or coal, etc.); - the absence of reciprocity, as the proposed measures do not have an equivalent in third countries; - the usefulness of the measure, as the directive referred to (93/38/EC) is a recent one and has to be reviewed in one or two years' time. Taking account of these aspects, the committee advocates rejecting the proposal and calls on the Commission to present a new text incorporating specific rules and exceptions for public contracts. ?

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

The rapporteur, Mr LANGEN (EPP, D), said that Parliament recognised the crucial importance of the agreement on public contracts. However, he thought that it was not an adequate approach to implement the agreement by way of an amendment of the existing Directives. The proposal failed to indicate with sufficient clarity the domains that were excluded from the scope of the agreement or the specific provisions applying to those contracts and sectors that could be classified as public. The rapporteur thought that in order to guarantee a sufficient level of precision in this area a new directive should be adopted that clearly incorporated the specific exceptions and regulations. He therefore proposed to reject the proposal for an amendment of the Directive and called on the Commission to present a new text. Commissioner MONTI stressed that the agreement on public tendering did not require any special legal arrangements for application in the Community. Moreover, the only amendments that had been introduced in order to provide for the consistent application of the agreement did not constitute a unilateral opening of public contracts to third-country companies. The Commissioner regretted that the negotiations with Parliament had not concluded by reaching a consensus on the proposals. However, the Commission intended to draft an amended proposal that would take Parliament?s concerns into account.

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend.

Directive 93/38/EEC)

In adopting the report by Mr Werner LANGEN (PPE, D), Parliament rejected the proposal to amend Directive 93/38/EEC and, under Rule 59(3) of its Rules of Procedure, referred the report back to committee. ?

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

In adopting the report by Mr Werner LANGEN (PPE, D), Parliament confirmed the rejection of the proposal for a Directive. It called on the Commission to withdraw its proposal and to replace it with a new one aimed at the transposition of the Agreement on Government Procurement by means of a specific (supplementary) directive. ?

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

Though the Commission did not accept the idea of a separate Directive transposing the Government Procurement Agreement (GPA) it nevertheless examined with Parliament the possibility of improving its proposal. The principal changes introduced in the modified proposals are as follows: - a clarification of the fields of application of the GPA and the Directives as well as a clear statement as to the legal regime applicable to third country companies; - the changes to the thresholds have been limited to the contracts and sectors which are subject to the GPA; - the obligation to inform eliminated candidates or tenderers of the reasons for their rejection and eliminated tenderers of the characteristics and advantages of the tender selected has been limited to the sectors covered by the GPA; - the amendments to the model notices, and in particular the notice on the existence of a qualification system and the periodic information notice, have been limited to what is explicitly required by the GPA as is the case regarding the information to be provided by contracting entities when they invite candidates to confirm their interest following publication of a periodic indicative notice used as a means of calling for competition; - the introduction of an obligation on the Commission to respect the commercially sensitive nature of information communicated by contracting entities in notices on contracts awarded and concerning prices. ?

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

The Council common position endeavoured to limit its amendments to Directive 93/38/EEC to what was strictly necessary in order to comply with the Agreement on Government Procurement (GPA), while taking care to ensure that this amendment did not endanger equal treatment for contracting bodies from the public and private sectors. The Council introduced new provisions in the common position which: - stipulate that the GPA has no direct effect in the Community; - stress that contracting authorities which comply with the basic directive (Directive 93/38/EEC), as amended by the present directive, are in compliance with the GPA; - add information about what does not fall within the scope of the GPA but is included in the field of application of Directive 93/38/EEC; - recall the fact implicit in the principles of Community law on public procurement, of Article IV(4) of the GPA, whereby contracting bodies cannot accept technical assistance when this would have the effect of preventing competition; - delete the reference to Spain, since it has abandoned the idea of an extended deadline for the implementation of the directive on its territory. The other changes made by the Council concern the following points, inter alia: - the scope of the directive: differentiated thresholds have been established for contracts covered by the GPA (expressed in SDRs) and for those not covered by the GPA (expressed in ECU); - the information to be supplied when periodic indicative notices are used as a means of competitive bidding: the provisions of the common position are in line with Article IX, paragraphs 4 and 6 of the GPA, which gives a list of the detailed information relating to the contract in question to be supplied in the periodic opinions; - the confidentiality of certain information on the awarding of contracts: the subject of prices is added to the information whose sensitive commercial nature the Commission must respect; - the deadlines for receipt of tenders: the deadlines for receipt of tenders have been made more flexible in cases where a periodic indicative notice has been published in advance; in addition, the deadlines have been changed slightly so that they are calculated from the date of the notice being sent, and not from the date of its publication; - information to be sent to unsuccessful applicants and tenderers: the obligation to provide information for unsuccessful candidates is limited to contracting bodies operating in the sectors covered by the GPA; - statistical obligations: the common position does not give details of all the information which must be included in annual statistics, but leaves it to the Commission, in consultation with the Advisory Committee for Public Contracts, to decide on the content of the statistics. Service contracts not covered by the GPA are exempted from the statistical obligations and are comprehensively listed; - entry into force: the date of entry into force is twelve months after adoption of the directive. Regarding transmission of tenders, the common position allows Member States to decide whether written confirmation of requests made electronically is necessary. It also allows the Member States to authorize submission of tenders by more appropriate means, bearing in mind technological progress in document transmission. However, guarantees relating to content, confidentiality, proof and the opening of tenders are required. A joint Council and Commission declaration accompanies this provision: it stresses that tenders must remain secret until the date set for opening them. ?

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

The Commission was able to approve the common position, since it did not substantially alter its amended proposal. In addition, the common position took account of the position of the European Parliament, especially with regard to the precise definition of the respective fields of application of the directive and the government procurement agreement (GPA).?

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

The Committee adopted a recommendation for second reading by Werner LANGEN (EPP, D) approving the Council common position implementing the GATT Government Procurement Agreement (GPA) in respect of public entities operating in the water, energy, transport and telecommunication sectors. Readers may recall that the Parliament rejected the original proposal at first reading, but since then the Commission has put forward an amended proposal which according to the rapporteur takes into account a majority of the concerns expressed by the Parliament. The Committee adopted five amendments to the common position which aim at explicitly exclude private companies from certain requirements to provide information and statistics. The Committee pointed out that additional obligations for the private sector must be rejected as the GPA is only binding on state contracting entities. ?

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

Commissioner Monti explained why he could not agree with Parliament?s position in all the cases where the amendments tabled diverged from the common position. This was because these amendments would either call into question the structure and logical basis of the Community arrangements or would be too mutually contradictory. For these reasons, he rejected Amendments Nos 3, 4 and 5 which violated the principle of equal treatment through which Community legislation avoided creating any forms of discrimination between Member States based on different administration models (whether or not public) in the same market sector. Furthermore, as regards the ?technical dialogue?, the Commissioner also could not accept Amendments Nos 1 and 6 which tackled this issue in an inconsistent manner. He considered that the common position adopted an intermediate solution in between the irreconcilable texts of the two proposed amendments and specifically allowed a certain amount of consistency to be maintained between the texts of the four directives on the public contract sectors.

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

The European Parliament adopted the recommendation for second reading by Mr Werner LANGEN (PPE, D). Since Parliament's concerns had been taken into account by the Commission in its amended proposal of 20 November 1996, Parliament approved the common position. It presented only five amendments aimed at specifically exempting private businesses from certain obligations with regard to providing information and statistics. It took the view that additional obligations for the private sector should be rejected since the GATT agreement on government procurement is only binding on public contracting bodies. ?

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

The Commission accepts two amendments from the European Parliament relating to the recitals of the Directive and as a result amends its proposal. These amendments stipulate: - that the tendering authorities may seek or accept an opinion which can be used for the introduction of specifications relating to a given contract, on condition that this opinion does not lead to a restriction of competition; - that the Commission will make available to SMEs the training and information material likely to promote their access to public contracts. However, the Commission rejects those amendments relating to: - the obligation to inform candidates of decisions taken on the awarding of contracts; - the obligation to inform rejected candidates of the reasons for the rejection and the characteristics and advantages of the bid which has been accepted; - the obligation to submit a statistical statement.?

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

The Council was unable to accept all the European Parliament's second reading amendments to its common position concerning the proposal for a Directive amending Directive 93/38/EEC coordinating the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors. The Conciliation Committee will therefore be convened.?

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

The joint text on coordinating procurement procedures in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors on which the EP/Council Conciliation Committee agreed on 6 November 1997 basically marked the successful conclusion of a long battle fought by the EP throughout the procedure. Although the conciliation eventually resulted in a quick agreement on technical dialogue and improving information to encourage access by SMEs to public contracts, this was because numerous problems had already been solved before this conciliation. The purpose of the Directive was to adapt the Community legislation to take account of the Government Procurement Agreement (GPA) reached within the WTO (World Trade Organisation). In 1996, the EP had rejected an initial Commission proposal because the amendments proposed went beyond the provisions laid down by the GPA. As the revised proposal took account of most of the EP?s concerns, it was accepted by Parliament, except for five points. On technical dialogue, the Conciliation Committee eventually accepted the solution proposed by the EP, namely that awarding bodies could request or accept outside opinions provided that this did not distort the competition conditions. Likewise, the Committee accepted the idea of supplying training and information materials to SMEs in order to encourage their participation in contracts. Finally, the provision of information on the award of contracts could be limited in cases where this might harm the commercial interests of the firm having won the contract. Moreover, a joint declaration specified that the firm having won the contract could ask for its information to be treated confidentially. Finally, the Directive specified that Member States should each year provide a statistical report on the contracts awarded so that they had the information needed to verify the proper application of the GPA. However, in a declaration, the Commission undertook to limit its requests to the strict minimum needed in order to meet the obligations arising from the GPA.

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

In adopting the report by Mr Werner LANGEN (EPP, D), Parliament approved the joint text of the Directive, approved by the Conciliation Committee, amending the 1993 Directive coordinating the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors.?

Procurement procedures water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors (amend. Directive 93/38/EEC)

OBJECTIVE: to amend the Directive on public contracts in the 'excluded' sectors, namely water, energy, transport and telecommunications, to render its provisions compatible with the Agreement on Government Procurement reached in the Uruguay Round. COMMUNITY MEASURE: European Parliament and Council Directive 98/4/EC amending Directive 93/38/EEC coordinating the procurement procedures of entities operating in the water, energy, transport and telecommunications sectors. SUBSTANCE: the proposed amendments bring the procedures laid down in Directive 93/38/EEC into line with those provided for by the above Agreement in order to prevent different rules from coexisting at Community and international level and to prevent any reverse discrimination against Community undertakings, i.e. more favourable treatment for third-country bidders. The thresholds currently applicable in telecommunications, namely ECU 5 m for works contracts and ECU 0.6 m for supply and service contracts, are unaltered. As regards the other sectors (water, energy and transport), the thresholds applicable are as follows: -SDR (special drawing rights) 5 m for works contracts; -SDR 0.4 m for supply and service contracts. The Directive lays down that contracting entities operating in the sectors covered by the Agreement (Annexes I, II, VII, VIII and IX) shall, as soon as possible after the reception of a written request, inform all rejected bidders of the reasons for the rejection of their bid, and inform all bidders who have submitted eligible bids of the characteristics and advantages of the bid accepted and the name of the successful bidder. However, this obligation must not damage the legitimate commercial interests of public or private undertakings or prejudice fair competition between suppliers, entrepreneurs or service providers. DEADLINE FOR TRANSPOSITION: 16/02/1999 (16/02/2000 for Greece and Portugal). ?
